1 INTRODUCTION

After spending some time recording material for Down In The Groove in the spring, Dylan reappeared together with The Grateful Dead for six summer shows in July. However the boyish image from last summer is now dramatically changed to the extreme opposite. Dylan is suddenly an old man, bearded, with an aching back, nearsighted, silent between songs and silent between shows. During the summer tour with The Grateful Dead and the Temples In Flames Tour in Europe in the fall he says not one single word in 36 concerts and he gives no interviews at all. Dylan 1987 - what happened?

4 DOWN IN THE GROOVE

The recording of Down In The Groove took place during a number of sessions starting in March and ending in June. Most songs recorded were covers. A number of titles are probably just the sound engineer's best guess, and these songs may or may not be Dylan compositions. There are many details missing and the summaries below give only a fragmentary picture.

5 SUMMER TOUR WITH THE GRATEFUL DEAD

5.1 Introduction

Sometime in the spring Dylan and The Grateful Dead apparently decided on a series of concerts together during The Grateful Dead's summer tour. Rehearsals took place at Club Front in San Rafael, California in June.

This collaboration with The Grateful Dead obviously influenced Dylan in (at least) three different ways:

1. The Dead encouraged him to search out his '60's and '70's catalog of songs, resulting in a number of live debuts.
2. From this tour onwards Dylan has played much more varied sets, often deciding the set list right before the show and then changing it on stage.
3. No more lengthy raps on stage. Starting with this tour and up to the Spring tour 1990 Dylan uttered barely a word on stage.

5.2 The musicians

The Grateful Dead were:

Jerry Garcia	guitar, steel guitar, slide guitar & backup vocal
Bob Weir	guitar & backup vocal
Phil Lesh	bass
Brent Mydland	keyboards
Bill Kreutzmann	drums
Mickey Hart	drums

5.3 The show

A concert opened with approximately two hours with The Grateful Dead followed by 12 or 13 songs with Bob Dylan and the Dead. There were one or two encores.

6 TEMPLES IN FLAMES – TOUR OF EUROPE

6.1 Introduction

The tour in Europe in the fall with Tom Petty & The Heartbreakers utterly different from their previous tour in the US, True Confessions. Dylan again was the elderly bard. Stage lights were so turned down you could hardly see him. His singing was at times extremely erratic, both in terms of phrasing and lyrics. The sets were apparently completely random, as can be seen from the song charts below. The Dylan part of the show was also very short. All this: short set, dark stage and Dylan not saying a word, compared of course very unfavorably to the previous shows in Europe in the summer of '84 and a lot of people went home utterly disappointed. It must be said though that The Heartbreakers provided excellent backing throughout the tour and that most of the shows were very, very good.

6.2 The Musicians

Tom Petty & The Heartbreakers:

Tom Petty (guitar, vocal)
Mike Campbell (guitar)
Benmont Tench (keyboards)
Howie Epstein (bass)
Stan Lynch (drums).

and The Queens Of Rhythm: Queen Esther Marrow, Madelyn Quebec, Carolyn Dennis.

6.3 The Show

The tour was done in collaboration with Roger McGuinn who opened each concert with a solo set consisting of 5 or 6 songs. He was then joined by Tom Petty & The Heartbreakers for the final 3-4 songs.

After Roger McGuinn's set, Tom Petty & The Heartbreakers performed their set of 7-8 songs. After an intermission, the lights went down, the sound got worse and Bob Dylan came on for his set which consisted of about 14 songs.

Starting with the show in Gothenburg, Sweden, 25 September, Dylan performed one, later two, acoustic songs, backed by Benmont Tench on piano and Mike Campbell on guitar.
